

GENRE

Genre is a term used to group different types of texts according to similarities in form and function.

Some aspects of genre are recognisable and familiar while others break conventions, are challenged and change over time. Knowing which genre a text falls into helps us know what to expect.